Vintage Report 2016

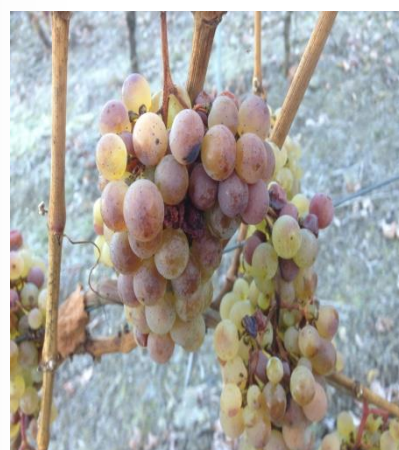

The growing season 2016 will be remembered for a long time at the Dr. Heidemanns-Bergweiler Wine-estate .
Weather conditions in 2016 challenged us a lot.

The beginning of the growing year was rather cold which delayed bud burst until late April 2016.

The first half of the year it rained quite a lot and some had problems with peronospora (downy mildew).
Our hard working vineyard team implemented plant protection in this bad weather to prevented most of it and we managed quite well.

August, September and October showed themselves from their best sides. Especially the September was very warm with a lot of sun hours for our Riesling grapes to grow into ripe fruits. The weather during October/November was without rain and as a result we have had healthy grapes.

In December we could harvest Icewine, which was not possible at the mosel Since 2010. In the early morning hours our workers picked the frozen grapes, while there were -7° Celcius outside.

It looks quite promising to become an excellent vintage 2016.
